Jean Le Harivel, né le 3 avril 1918 et mort le 6 mars 2006, fut, pendant la Seconde Guerre mondiale, un agent britannique du service secret britannique Special Operations Executive.

État civil : Jean Philippe Charles Le Harivel

Comme agent du SOE:

Nom de guerre (field name) : Georges 25 (le prénom Georges correspond à la fonction d'opérateur radio)

Nom de code opérationnel : HICCUP (en français HOQUET)

Parcours militaire : SOE, section F; grade: lieutenant

Éléments biographiques:

Il est l'un des membres de la mission CORSICAN (à la fois saboteur, comme ses collègues, et radio de la mission) parachutée dans la nuit du 10 au 11 octobre 1941 à Beleymas, près de Bergerac ; et, comme les autres, il est arrêté par la police de Vichy dans les jours mêmes qui suivent son arrivée. Après un séjour à Périgueux, il est conduit au camp de Mauzac, d'où il s'évade, le 16 juillet 1942, avec dix camarades (voir l'article évasion de Mauzac). Pris en charge par le réseau d'évasion VIC (de la section DF), passé par l'Espagne mais arrêté par les Espagnols et interné à Miranda de Ebro, le groupe ne parvient à Londres qu'en octobre... Mais déjà, en avril 1943, Jean Le Harivel repart pour la France avec SCULLION 1, et doit, une nouvelle fois, revenir par l'Espagne, heureusement alors sans encombre. Ensuite Jean Le Harivel est affecté à l'état-major de la section F.

Distinctions

Royaume-Uni: Mention in Despatches,

France: Croix de Guerre 1939-1945.

[HOWARTH, Patrick Hohn Fielding - born , 25.04.1916. Special Operations Executive officer who after the war turned prolific author and broadcast his own poetry on the BBC. Obituaries: \[www.independent.co.uk\]\(http://www.independent.co.uk\):](#)

ONE of the earliest members of the wartime Special Operations Executive, Patrick Howarth, did valuable work on its staff in London, and in training agents at various secret locations around Britain. Turning man of letters after the war, he published books on a wide variety of subjects as well as writing poetry. Notable among his prose works were two on the SOE, one of which, a collection of essays by SOE agents, he edited and the other he wrote.

Patrick John Fielding Howarth learnt at Rugby, like his friend Peter Wilkinson, the elements of resistance to authority, and he went on to St John's College, Oxford, from which he graduated just before the Second World War began. With a character at once genial and combative, stoutly patriotic, and good at keeping his mouth shut when he had to, he was an ideal recruit to the SOE.

The symbol MX1, allotted to him, meant and was meant to mean nothing to the outside world. To an initiate, it meant that he worked under the immediate eye of (Major-General Sir) Colin Gubbins, variously described as SOE's mainspring and its linchpin.

Gubbins originally ran the operations and training departments; by late 1943 he was executive head of the whole show under Lord Selborne. SOE's operations had to start slowly. There were no agents on the spot at first. They had to be found, trained and inserted — usually by parachute.

Howarth was never one to “speed glum heroes up the line to death” without taking his share of risk. He did parachute training as a matter of course, when it was far more dangerous than it is today. He also took part in SOE's main training courses, in paramilitary techniques on the Inverness-shire coast and in secret tradecraft at Beaulieu in the New Forest.

He never himself went on operations, for he commanded no foreign language well enough to pass for a native, but he made himself thoroughly useful on the Baker Street staff. He did spend several weeks in Italy in 1944, with a party of Polish friends, waiting to go on a sabotage mission into the Balkans, but after many postponements it was cancelled.

His tact and sympathy were invaluable when dealing with the governments-in-exile in wartime London, whose consent had usually to be sought before SOE could dispatch agents into their countries. How thoroughly he became imbued with SOE's spirit became clear after the war, in two of his books. One, Special Operations which he edited in 1955, was a collection of essays (already in print) by former members of SOE, recounting their authors' various astonishing adventures, from which the proceeds went to the Special Forces Club, of which Howarth was an original and lifelong member.

The other, Undercover, he wrote himself, and it came out in 1980. He was dissatisfied with the treatment that some of SOE's heroes and heroines had received from the popular press, and felt the official histories that had come out were too dry. So he gave his own recollections of such outstanding characters as Forrest Yeo-Thomas, GC, Algar Hesketh-Prichard and Christine Granville, and sketched the critical role SOE had played in keeping civilisation alive against Nazi barbarism.

After the war he had a brief spell in the foreign service, serving in the mission in Warsaw. This he had to leave because he married a Polish wife — it turned out a disastrous marriage, and was soon dissolved.

He then turned full-time author. He wrote several books about the lifeboat service, of which he was a leading supporter. His two novels, The Dying Ukrainian and A Matter of Minutes, both appeared in 1951 and reflected corners of his wartime life. In the same year he published a retrospective of England in the year of the Great Exhibition of 100 years before. He wrote also on parliamentary questions, on the French Riviera, and on schoolboy stories, as well as a life of Sir John Squire, Squire: Most Generous of Men, which appeared in 1963.

His range of interests is shown by his life of Attila, king of the Huns, and the range of his intellect by his excellent Intelligence Chief Extraordinary (1986), a life of Sir William Cavendish-Bentinck, 9th, and last Duke of Portland. It was Cavendish-Bentinck who turned the Joint Intelligence Committee into a worthwhile body, which performed major tasks of strategic analysis during the Second World War. It did wonders for the chiefs of staff committee, under which it worked, and in Howarth it found a worthy analyst of its successes.

Like Squire, Howarth wrote verse, and in his seventies he gave up metropolitan life for the sake of country peace and quiet in Dorset, where he settled down to what Edward Grey once called the proper occupations of a gentleman, drinking wine and writing poetry. Play Back a Lifetime and The Four Seasons collected some of his poetical broadcasts.

A second marriage was short-lived. The death of Eva, his third wife, three years ago, of course distressed, but did not quite silence, him: he was broadcasting poetry this autumn.

Patrick Howarth, wartime SOE officer and author, was born on April 25, 1916. He died on November 12, 2004, aged 88.

Patrick John Fielding Howarth, poet, writer, public-relations officer and soldier: born Calcutta, India 25

April 1916; three times married; died Sherborne, Dorset 12 November 2004.

It was a guiding principle of Patrick Howarth's long and colourful life that he should do what he enjoyed doing. This took him on a journey through more careers than most people dream about: soldier, journalist, diplomat, biographer, historian, traveller and poet. The last was the most precious to him and poetry the talent for which he would most have liked to be remembered. Yet he suppressed it for more than 30 years.

Born in 1916 in Calcutta - his father was manager of the New Zealand Insurance Company - Howarth had visited every continent before he was six. His literary development began at Rugby School, where he fell for the poetry of Housman and Blake and began to write verse himself.

When Siegfried Sassoon came to talk to the school literary society, the 17-year-old Howarth presented him with some early work and got a distinctly favourable reaction. Two years later, in his first year at St John's College, Oxford, he entered for the Newdigate Poetry Prize, failing to win it, but getting a letter of praise and an invitation to dine at the High Table in Magdalen from one of the judges, C.S. Lewis.

Howarth's father had a business career in mind for his younger son, but Howarth at 22 had other ideas. A love of languages and a taste for travel took him to Poland where he edited a political quarterly, aimed at the Baltic and Scandinavian worlds, part of Poland's attempt, on the eve of the Second World War, to create a cordon sanitaire between Germany and Russia.

He also managed to play tennis for Britain, since the British Davis Cup team was prevented from attending the Polish national championships by the possibility of war. When it came, Howarth got out by the skin of his teeth and joined the Army in time to defend Bognor beach from invasion, moving on to Gibraltar and his only stab at pantomime. He wrote the lyrics for the Christmas 1940 production of Aladdin, directed by Lieutenant Anthony Quayle, who was to read one of Howarth's narrative poems on radio 40 years later.

Things then got a great deal more serious as the young soldier was recruited into Special Operations Executive (SOE) where, for several years, he was official controller of some of the most daring British agents in occupied Europe, including the gallant and glamorous Christine Granville.

After the war, Howarth was back in Poland as Press Attaché at the British Embassy in Warsaw, observing at first hand the descent of the Iron Curtain and working for an ambassador he much admired, Bill Cavendish-Bentinck, whose biography he afterwards wrote (Intelligence Chief Extraordinary: the life of the ninth Duke of Portland, 1986).

Warsaw in 1945 was a ruin comparable with Hiroshima and the British Embassy at first operated from the fourth floor of a former railway hotel. In spite of this, spirits were high, drink flowed and a succession of distinguished visitors came and went, including the composer Constant Lambert. Howarth had a vivid memory of standing with him among the ruins in a snow-storm, arguing furiously about the correct wording of a limerick.

It was on the same streets that he had a close encounter with death, knocked down and run over by a Red Army lorry. Although not expected to live, he was saved by the skill of a Jewish surgeon, who had somehow survived the Holocaust. Howarth never worried about death again.

Howarth left Warsaw abruptly, having married a Polish woman with - from the point of view of British Security - dubious family connections. The marriage was a disaster and soon collapsed. Almost as brief was his first job back in England with the Ministry of Town and Country Planning - Howarth had little time for the post-war urban vision of both left and right, lampooning it in his 1952 civil service satire, A Matter of Minutes.

Ernest Kirkeby JACOBSEN: Norwegian. JACOBSEN, an SOE agent, was landed in Norway in March 1942 SOE Agents. Ernest Kirkeby JACOBSEN: Norwegian. JACOBSEN, an SOE agent, was landed in Norway in March 1942 to set up W/T communications for a sabotage group in Ostfold, Norway. He was arrested in August of the same year, but his communications continued with his limited co-operation. He was released in September 1942 and lived at home with his wife in the expectation, on the Germans' part, that other agents might try to contact him. In January 1943 he escaped to Sweden and thence to the UK. He freely admitted his co-operation with the Germans and emphasised that he had no mission for the Germans in this country. He later joined the Norwegian Air Force. Collection: Records of the Security Service. Date range: 18 August 1942 - 27 November 1943. Reference: KV 2/828. KLUGMAN, Norman John, alias James: British. KLUGMAN, an avowed communist and active before the Second ... Norman John KLUGMAN, alias James: British. KLUGMAN, an avowed communist and active before the Second World War particularly in Comintern Student affairs, joined the Royal Army Service Corps as a private in 1940. Having a double first from Oxford, he was soon assessed to be ill-placed and was transferred to SOE, apparently without a proper security assessment. He survived to the rank of major and was later reliably thought to have worked to achieve Soviet ends while at the same time doing useful work for SOE. Collection: Records of the Security Service. Date range: 27 February 1947 - 16 October 1950. Reference:KV 2/789. Subjects: Army, Operations, battles and campaigns, Communism.

SPRINGHALL was a founder member of the Communist Party of Great Britain (CPGB) who attended the Lenin School in Moscow, and held party administrative positions at the highest levels including the Central Committee and, from 1940, was National Organiser. In 1943 he was sentenced to seven years imprisonment for obtaining classified information for the Russians from Olive SHEEHAN, a clerk in the Air Ministry who was the leader of a secret Communist group there. Subsequent enquiries showed that SPRINGHALL had also exploited the Communist convictions of Captain Desmond UREN, a Staff Officer in SOE, to obtain classified information. UREN was court-martialled and also sentenced to seven years. Enquiries suggested that SPRINGHALL had been extensively involved in covert activities on behalf of the Party for many years. He died in Moscow in 1953. Collection: Records of the Security Service. Date range: 01 January 1932 - 31 December 1935. Reference: KV 2/1595. UREN, Ormond (Desmond). Also jailed in 1943 was Ormond (Desmond) Uren (fl. 1940s), a Scottish junior officer in the Highland Light Infantry, who had been seconded to SOE's Hungarian sabotage and resistance organization at its headquarters in London. He was arrested in June 1943 after a clandestine meeting with Douglas Springhall. Both were GRU agents. He had passed Springhall information on the SOE policy and communications on Eastern Europe, in order to indicate that his commitment to communism was sincere. He was a secret member of the CPGB, which he had joined in 1940. In October 1943 he was court-martialed, lost his commission, and received a sentence of seven years in jail. He commented that he might not have been caught and tried had he gone to Cambridge University instead of the University in Edinburgh. (Encyclopedia of Cold War Espionage, Spies, and Secret

SPRINGHALL was a founder member of the Communist Party of Great Britain (CPGB) who attended the Lenin School in Moscow, and held party administrative positions at the highest levels including the Central Committee and, from 1940, was National Organiser. In 1943 he was sentenced to seven years imprisonment for obtaining classified information for the Russians from Olive SHEEHAN, a clerk in the Air Ministry who was the leader of a secret Communist group there. Subsequent enquiries showed that SPRINGHALL had also exploited the Communist convictions of Captain Desmond UREN, a Staff Officer in SOE, to obtain classified information. UREN was court-martialled and also sentenced to seven years. Enquiries suggested that SPRINGHALL had been extensively involved in covert activities on behalf of the Party for many years. He died in Moscow in 1953. Collection: Records of the Security Service. Date range: 01 January 1932 - 31 December 1935. Reference: KV 2/1595.
